Bentonville, Ark.-based Walmart said more than 4,000 of its 4,700 Walmart U.S. stores will expand their closing time as of 8:30 p.m. up to 10 p.m. through Aug. 17, providing customers with larger options to shop for the food, medicine and supplies they need. The company has cut hours at Walmart and Neighborhood Market locations at 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. effective March 19 to give associates more time to clean stores, stock inventory products and introduce COVID-19 safeguards. While we continue to reopen our operations, the health and safety of our associates, customers and communities will guide our decisions, a Walmart spokesperson said in an email Friday. We will continue to assess our remaining stores to determine the right time to extend their closing hours. With this change, we will continue with the health and safety measures currently in place, such as social distancing, health screenings, plastic barriers at the registers and masks. WalmartSince July 20, all shoppers are required to wear face coverings at all Walmart U.S. stores. A face mask mandate has been in effect since April 20 for associates at all stores, clubs, distribution and fulfillment centers, and corporate offices. Walmart said its stores will continue to retain an exclusive shopping period every Tuesday, one hour before opening (6 a.m. to 7 a.m.), for customers of 60 and older, which is at higher risk for the virus. Pharmacies and vision centers will also be open during that time. Most Walmart pharmacies are open July 9.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10 .m on .m. At the beginning of the coronavirus, many big-box retailers and grocery stores changed their opening hours, cleaning procedures and delivery options to cater to customers. But after growing concerns about those most susceptible to COVID-19, major chains including Walmart, Target and Safeway announced they would retain a special hour for seniors and vulnerable buyers to get what they needed at a comfortable pace while avoiding crowds. Although the number of coronavirus cases continues to rise nationwide, many stores have scaled back their senior hours in recent months. Publix was one of the first major grocery chains to do so: In mid-May, they announced they would no longer hold reserved shopping hours for seniors and health care workers. Instead, Publix encourages shoppers to shop once the stores open, when it's freshly saturated and less crowded. Costco followed, but reverse its decision in wake of record-breaking COVID-19 numbers: Effective December 7, all Costco stores will offer a senior shopping spree for anyone 60 and until further notice from Monday to Friday. As a reminder, the COVID-19 outbreak is constantly evolving, which means that the senior hours and status of your local chains can also change. It's best to call your nearest location before you head out to get the most up-to-date information.
